

- A Paris, a prince of Troy, was asked to be the judge of a beauty contest among three goddesses: Hera, Athena, and Aphrodite. A golden apple will be given to the winner. To win the apple, Hera promised Paris power, Athena promised him wisdom and the power to lead a great army, and Aphrodite promised him the most beautiful woman in the world. At the end of the contest, Paris gave the apple to Aphrodite.
- B The king of Sparta, who was also the husband of Helen, was away when Paris went there. At first sight of Helen, Paris fell in love with the great beauty immediately. Helen, attracted to this beautiful young man, later agreed to leave Sparta with him. The two then left secretly for Troy and took with them a lot of Sparta's gold and treasure.
- C When Achilles was a baby, his mother took him by one of his heels and put him in a river called the Styx, so that his body could never be harmed. Of course, the heel she held later became the only weakness on Achilles's body. When Achilles grew up, he became the greatest warrior in the Trojan War. However, one day, Paris shot an arrow toward Achilles, and Apollo, the god of the sun, guided the arrow to Achilles' heel. It led to the death of Achilles, who was one of the greatest heroes in Greek mythology.
- D When the wooden horse was first discovered, the Trojan king wanted to roll it into the city. But a Trojan man warned against it. As he was speaking, a huge sea monster, which was sent by Athena, rose from the sea and killed the man and his two sons. Of course, the warning was rejected. The Trojans then rolled the Trojan Horse into the city, and it later led to the fall of Troy.
